However, I did notice that surrounding caps seem to have similar or the same values. So my suggestion would be to have a look around those nearby components. Failing that, take a look at the circuit and what C4 is supposed to do, and make a best guess at its value. In other words an engineers approach. But lastly, are we sure that C4 is faulty What does the voltage look like on an oscilloscope Lee There is a lot of good stuff about caps on the web. The outer cabinet is manufactured from stainless steel, and has a tough powder coat paint finish. This gives the incubator exceptional corrosion resistance. An inner glass viewing door closes positively onto a silicone gasket and allows a clear view of the chamber contents without disturbing the internal atmosphere. The outer door has a magnetic gasket providing a good seal. A rear access port allows temperature monitoring probes to be inserted safely into the incubator chamber. All models have gentle fan assisted air circulation. This ensures even temperature distribution throughout the chamber. Fast temperature recovery keeps heat loss to a minimum after door opening. An independent safety cut out disconnects the heating elements should an over temperature condition occur. The controller can be password protected too, stopping any unauthorised adjustments to the Set Point and alarm thresholds. LEEC prides itself on being able to deliver exactly what the customer wants and relishes the challenge of producing a Incubator that is tailored to every specific customer need. Please be aware that LEEC will endeavour to meet every customer requirement request.
